Earlier in his re- port, Mesarites mentions how on arriving in Constantinople he demonstra- tively declined to mount a horse equipped with red saddle and red reins. For we were compelled either to violate the law, and thus be amenable to punishment, or else, by compliance with its injunctions, to nullify the statutes of the Church; inasmuch as it is impossible to bring important questions to a satisfactory adjustment, except by means of synods.

OnlytheLatintranslationofthetreatisemadebytheItalianhumanistAmbro MOREOVER, by loud proclamation and monumental inscriptions he made known to all men the salutary symbol, setting up this great trophy of victory over his enemies in the midst of the imperial city, and expressly causing it to be engraved in indelible characters, that the salutary symbol was the safeguard of the Roman government and of the entire empire.
