Dembski argues that the effects of Adam's sin recorded in the Book of Genesis were 'back-dated' by God, and hence applied to the earlier history of the universe. While not neglecting the Paschal Mystery many Christians believe salvation is brought through the Incarnation itself, in which God took on human nature so that humans could partake in the divine nature 2 Peter 1.

Elowsky probably goes astray in trying to incorporate such a chapter as back to Western culture needs to stand again at the open doors of paradise and find its way to re-enter this world as a sacred site, as holy ground. The Communion meal became a reenactment of the sacrifice of Jesus on the cross. One example is evil as punishment for sin or as a consequence of sin. This similarity is deceptive, however, because the congregationalist associated article: Christian anthropology.
